“ I have not seen my great-uncle Chester since I moved from Kansas City in the mid 80's. Though I did see him frequently when I was growing up.

I remember as a kid, I was always glad to see him because he was fun to be around. Every time I saw him, he would always show me his flexed bicep and demonstrate how strong he was. I was always very impressed.

He would also entertain our family by walking on his hands. And every time he did, his pockets would empty out on the sidewalk or driveway and we would get a big laugh. Fun times!

I will always remember him fondly.

“ My great-uncle Chester was one of the kindest men I've ever known. Many years ago, when I was in a very difficult season of my life, Uncle Chester was in town visiting his sister, my grandmother Juanita. During that visit, I overheard him talking to another family member about my situation. I heard him say, "She's going to make a better life for herself. You watch and see. She's going to be just fine." The impact of those simple words was unforgettable, a blessing full of hope and promise spoken over me. My uncle's faith in me, all those years ago, made a difference in my life, and I've always loved him for it.
