Dale John Morris

Dale John Morris, age 64, died unexpectedly from a heart attack on January 29, 2018. He was at home in Soap Lake, Washington where he has lived for the last 4 years. He was born October 24 1953 to Joe and Clara Morris in Ellensburg, Washington. He grew up and lived in 'Ducktown' in Roslyn, Washington. He graduated from Cle Elum High School, Class of 1971 and from Central Washington University in 1975 with a BA in English.

Over the years Dale was employed by Strand's Land Surveying, the US Forest Service, U&I Sugar Lab, WSDOT as construction inspector, and for Wal-Mart, Bi-Mart, and Farm and Home as a store clerk. On the side, he played guitar in Jeffery's Band.

Dale's passion was fly-tying for 'catch and release' fly- fishing. He loved & spoiled his Brittany spaniels. He enjoyed reading books across many genres, but especially science fiction. He wrote short stories featuring 'local' characters, played the guitar and some keyboard, hunted mushrooms, grew cactus, and cheered on the Mariners and Seahawks.

Dale is survived by his brother Jim (Sandy) Maras of Seatac, sister Rita (Tom) Thornber of Redmond, and nephews David and Collin Thornber and Mark

Maras.

It is suggested that donations in Dale's remembrance be made to the charity assistance fund on the bill from your local power or utility company.

“ Dale, I am going to miss our discussions on the drive and visits to Soap Lake. We seldom talked politics or anything serious, but stuff like our latest theories about caveman dogs and how they eventually moved in and became our pets.

“ I worked with Dale when he was employed at Bi Mart. He always had a smile and a friendly greeting for you. So saddened to hear of his passing and at such a young age. He can do all the fishing anywhere he wants now.
Condolences to his family and the many friends he made around the valley during his time here.

“ Went to school with Dale from Kindergarten to graduation from Cle Elum Roslyn High School. He was always a good friend. He shared his love of fly fishing with the high school students of Easton. He showed these students how to fish the Yakima river.
